they deale by intercession all, they keepe
a kind of household Gods, call'd chamber-maides, which being pray'd to, and their offerings brought, (wch. are in gold, yet some obserue the old law and giue em flesh) probatum est, you shall haue as good loue for your monie, and as tydie as ere you turn'd your legge ore, and that ended,

Tra. Why thou art growne a strange discouerer

Row. Of mine owne follies Tranio

Tran. Wilt thou Rowland certaine neere loue againe,

Row. I thinke so certaine, and if I be not dead drunke, I shall keepe it.

Tran. Tell me but this, what doest thou thinke of woman.

Row. Why as I thinke of fidles, they delight me till they strings breake.

Tran. What strings?

Row their modesties, faithes, vowes, and maidenheads, for they are like kits they haue but fowre strings to 'em.

Tran. What wilt thou giue me for ten pounds now, when thou next louest
& the same woman still.

Row. Giue me the monie, a hundred, an my bond for't.

Tran But pray heare me
Ile worke all meanes I can to reconcile ye.

Row. Doe, doe giue me the monie.

Tran. There.

Row Worke Tranio.

Tran. You shall goe sometimes where she is.

Row. yes

Row. Yes, straight.
this is the first good I ere got by woeman.

Tran. You would thinke it strange now if another beauty as good as hers. say better.

Row. Well.

Tran. Conceaue me
this is no point o'th wager,

Row That's all one

Tra. Loue ye as much or more then she now hates ye.

Row. 'Tis a good hearing, lett em loue, ten pound more
I neuer loue that woman.

Tran There it is,
and so a hundred if ye loose,

Row 'Tis done, haue ye another to put in.

Tra. No more Sir.

Row I am very sorrie, now will I erect a new game, and goe hate forthbell, I am sure I am in excellent case to win,

Tra. I must haue leaue to tell ye, and tell truth to what she is,
and what she suffers for you.

Row. Ten pounds more
I neuer beleeue ys'e.

Tra. No Sir I am stunted,

Row. Well take your best way then.

Tra. Let's walke, I am glad your sullen feauer's off.

Row 'Shalt see me Tranio
a monstrous merry man now, let's to y^e. wedding, & as we goe tell me the generall hurry

of these
